The central thought around which Mr. Lippmanu's book is written is Admiral Mahau's statement in his 'Force in International Relations,''-'It is the great amount of unexploited raw material in territories politi- INT cally backward, and now imperfectly Int possessed by the nominal owners which at the present moment constitutes the temptation and the impulse to war of European states." He proposes as a solution, the internationalizing of these backward countries and placing them under the controlof a world state, thus in time the 'Stakes of Diplomacy'' will be organized out of existence.
